

Many Played A Role

Mark Winters

This is the first Southern California Tennis Association News of 2004. Since it coincides with Black History Month, there is no better time to look at the game's sectional development in the African American community.

Unfortunately, developing a comprehensive list of the individuals who have made an impact in tennis locally is bound to neglect someone. Those mentioned in this story are significant, not only for their on-court talent, but also for their diverse personalities. Oscar Johnson is a name at the top of the list. He became a newsmaker, winning the Boy's 18 National Public Parks singles title in 1948. The victory was a benchmark. It is recognized as the first United States Lawn Tennis Association national championships win by an African American.

Eight years before, on July 29, 1940, Jimmy McDaniel attracted more attention. The American Tennis Association (ATA) champion played Don Budge, the "greatest tennis players in the world"; (according to the "Brooklyn Daily Eagle"), at the Cosmopolitan Tennis Club in New York City. The newspaper also noted that the match, witnessed by 2000 spectators, marked a change, "the color was erased, (at least temporarily), for the first time in the history of major American Tennis, yesterday."

On the Southern California stage, Johnson and McDaniel were formidable players. Earthna Jacquet played at the same level. So did Willis Fennell, once considered a better tennis prospect than Arthur Ashe. They set the standard — one that established the benchmark for the next generation of players.

"After I started playing, I found out about Earthna," said Doug Sykes, the Boy's 18 National Public Parks winner in 1961. "He, along with Oscar and Jimmy, inspired me."

Sy Allen Browning, Fred Nobles, Hollis Smith and Richard Williams have experienced tennis' coming of age in the community. (An interesting aside is that Browning, Nobles and Smith were responsible for establishing the first National Junior Tennis League chapter in Los Angeles in the late '60s.) "There were five or six black clubs in California," said Nobles, whose father Jimmy was one of the Pacific Coast Championships founders. "The idea was

Dodo's Day

Dodo Cheney

Sunday, July 11th will be Dodo's Day in Newport, Rhode Island. On that date, the incomparable Dorothy (Dodo) Bundy Cheney will be inducted into the International Tennis Hall of Fame, along with Stefan Edberg and Steffi Graf. Hall of Fame ceremonies are always memorable, but this year's will set a new standard because the famed location is celebrating its 50th Anniversary. In honor of the occasion, a "Parade of Hall of Famers" involving more than 40 enshrinees, will take place.

It is fitting that Cheney will be part of the show. The daughter of 1956 Hall of Fame inductee May Sutton Bundy and US doubles champion Tom Bundy, she became the first American to win the – clubs would play a championship (PCC) and the winners would have an automatic entry in the American Tennis Association championships. I remember playing the junior tournament. It would be Doug, myself and two other juniors.

“The basis for growth of Black tennis was the formation of the clubs that became the PCC. I grew up in San Diego and remember going to Mountain View Park. There were two courts in the Black community and we played from 8:00 AM until sunset on Saturday and Sunday. In the early afternoon, the older players started the barbeque. On the weekend, there was a lot of eating and drinking. It was a festive time.”

In the old days, Exposition, Harvard, Rancho Cienega, (for some, synonymous with Dorsey, since the high school courts are across from the facility), Ross Snyder and Will Rogers (renamed Ted Watkins) Parks were the places to play. Up until the tennis courts were replaced by the Sports Center in 1959, Exposition Park was stroking ground for those with a big time game (players such as Jacquet, Johnson and McDaniel along with Pancho Gonzalez). In the original agreement between the City and the Parks & Recreation Department, replacement courts were part of the overall plan, but the needs of the community have changed over the years, making the tennis court addition a dead issue.

Anyone who has spent time playing park tennis knows that each venue has its own set of rules and competitive fervor. “There was a time when guys who lived in Ventura and San Bernardino would drive to LA to play at Rancho (Dorsey),” Nobles said. “There has always been a rivalry between the parks. Dorsey used to take players from Harvard because that was where the tournament players practiced.”

Sykes, who attended Cal, has remained a Berkeley resident. He remembered his days at Harvard saying, “playing in the ‘60s was rather uneventful. For me, it was just a matter of trying to win without a game; running down a lot of balls. I would play in the morning and there would be guys betting on me. I would finish my match, get my lunch money from the winners and come back to play in the afternoon.”

With every location there are traditions, amusing stories to be told and characters to talk about. According to Nobles, there were a number of players with memorable nicknames, “there were two ‘Smitty’s’; one was Larry Smith; the other was Hollis Smith. ‘Schoolboy’ Mitchell was another, and so was ‘Stocks’; Ted Stoglin was a fixture at Harvard. He started the Stoglin Cup, a rivalry between Harvard and Dorsey.”

This year’s annual Frank Simmon’s No. 1 New Year’s Day Tournament at Harvard Park was a very special affair according to Dee Williams-Horne, “more than 200 Black players turned out in his memory. It was a wonderful salute to a great guy.”

Williams-Horne is encyclopedic when she talks about playing at Rancho Cienega and Harvard Parks. “I have recollections of so many people; people like Jean Richardson who influenced me,” she said. “I remember playing with the late Andrea Buchanan Whitmore and watching young players such as Diana Morrison and her sister Rochelle, and Cheryl Jones. Earl Prince and Warrick Jones also played there. Though they are not from Southern California, Benny Sims, (who is Chanda Rubin’s coach), and Stan Franker, (who attended USC, then was the head coach for the Dutch Federation), were regulars at Rancho.

“At the time, I didn’t realize what a great opportunity it was. I didn’t realize how good all these people helped me become. When Andrea went out and started winning on the pro tour, it began to make sense. People improved just being around all the players.”

Any story about African American tennis in Southern California must mention Eleese Thornton. It would be difficult, if not impossible, to find an African American woman who influenced more people or did more for the game in the section than Thornton. As a player and a goodwill ambassador, she was in a league of her own. “My last year in high school (1943) a friend got a tennis racket for Christmas,” Jeannette Washington said. “She gave me one because she didn’t have anyone to play with. Eleese was a great influence. She helped me and many others. Thanks to her, I became a fair player, not an outstanding one. I played with the fellas because not many ladies played. It was a hobby. I love the game.”

A sentiment, it seems, that everyone in the Southern California African American tennis community would support.

Australian National Championships in 1938, and from ’37-39 was a member of the winning Wightman Cup team. She was US Indoor doubles champion in 1941; US Clay Court singles winner in ’44 and US Hard Court doubles titlist in ’54. Her Grand Slam record is impressive having been a US doubles finalist in 1940 and ’41; a mixed doubles finalist in ’40 and ’44 and a Wimbledon mixed finalist in ’46.

Though Cheney was ranked in the US top 10 on 11 occasions, she didn’t really hit her stride until she moved into the senior ranks. “I started playing the National Hard Court Championships at La Jolla when I was 39,” she remembered. “I won the singles title 13 years in a row. I was finally dethroned when I was 53.”

The year before, the charming Cheney was a finalist in the Southern California Tennis Association Open Women’s Championship having to default in the final at 9-9 in the pre-Tie-Break third set because of a pulled muscle.

When I officially heard, I think I took it pretty calmly,” Cheney admitted. “I think I said, ‘oh isn’t that wonderful. That’s great’. I hope I deserve it. All the other inductees have been champions of the world.”

Cheney continued, “what an honor. I’m very flattered to be in there with Steffi and Stefan. I’m very fortunate.”

And so is the game of tennis.

Mercedes-Benz Cup Showcase

The Mercedes-Benz Cup, an ATP International Series event which benefits Southern California Tennis Association programming, will showcase the best in men's professional tennis at the Los Angeles Tennis Center-UCLA from July 12th through July 18th. Early tournament entries include: Lleyton Hewitt, Gustavo Kuerten, Mark Philippoussis, David Nalbandian, Paradorn Srichapan and Mardy Fish. Wayne Ferreira, the 2003 champion, will also be on hand.

New To The Team

Mark Winters

Bill Vance

Tiffany Geller

The Southern California Tennis Association, which is known for its unrivaled staff, added two new members last fall. Bill Vance is now the Adult & Senior Tennis Assistant, and Tiffany Geller is the High Performance Assistant.

Vance, having spent 15 years in the Air Force in Special Operations Aerospace Weapons and time as Director of Information Technology for the US Veterans Initiative, has an extremely diverse work background. On the tennis front, he is an experienced NTRP and League competitor. He also has been in the trenches coaching the girl's team at Elizabeth Learning Center in Cudahy to a Magnet League Championship.

"I started playing tennis as a lark," the ever smiling Vance admitted. "A friend at work (Veterans Initiative) got me involved, then beat me like crazy. I joined the West End Racquet Club and began taking two lesson a week. I did that for three months and have never looked back."

Geller began playing wheelchair tennis in high school. In time, she became a national and international competitor becoming a top 50 performer in the world rankings and reaching the top 10 in the US. Geller, who has spent time coaching wheelchair players, is a member of the USA Wheelchair Tennis Committee.

The fact that Vance, as the saying goes of certain tennis players, "has good hands" will benefit him enormously. "I am Annette Buck's (who is the Director of Adult & Senior Tennis) right hand, and I also work with Ali Ordonez (who runs League programs). Drawing on my experience, I hope to bring a more updated player's view of adult and League competition."

Having lived locally for three years in the mid-90s, Geller is "glad to be back in Southern California" and she is looking to make a difference in High Performance.

Juniors from the section made their mark in late 2003 tournament play. Andrew Eklov won the Boy's 18 Super National Winter Championships Consolation (5th place). More importantly, he was the Boy's 18 Sportsmanship Award winner. Playing partners for the first time, Jonathan Calienes/Alex Krueger-Wyman won their first gold ball each at the Boy's 16 Super National Winter Championships.

Jessica Nguyen almost duplicated Eklov's feat, but in this case she was the Girl's 18 Super National Winter Championships Consolation winner (5th place). Victoria Brymer was a doubles finalist with Stephanie Schnitter of San Jose. Nazlie Ghazal/Ally Krasnopolsky finished third in doubles.

Logan Hansen doubled at the Girl's 16 Super National Winter Championships winning the singles and the Sportsmanship Award.

Hilary Barte finished fourth in singles. Cosmina Ciobanu/Kristen McVitty were doubles finalists.

Steve Forman and Steve Johnson kept their Boy's 14 National Championships streak going. Like the Super Nationals, Forman was the Winter Championships singles winner and, as he did last summer, teamed with Johnson for doubles honors. Raymond Sarmiento was the Boy's 12 Super National Winter Championships singles winner. He and Chris Freeman were doubles finalists.

Katarina Reveche was a Girl's 14 Super National Winter Championships finalist. Natasha Makarova finished third. In doubles action, Kendra Ivey/Makarova were fourth. At the Girl's 12 Super National Winter Championships, Brittany Augustine was a finalist. In an all-SoCal Consolation final, Thien-Trang Nguyen defeated Catherine Isip.

Katarina Reveche

Brittany Augustine

Danielle Lao/Nguyen were doubles finalists. Augustine/Mary Weatherholt of Shawnee Mission, Kansas finished third, and Jordaan Sanford/Maxine Thomas were fourth. Augustine was also the Sportsmanship Award winner.

At the Copper Bowl, Claire Rietsch was the Girl's 16 winner; Ryan Thacher was a Boy's 14 finalist; and Brittany Augustine defeated Catherine Isip for the Girl's 12 title.

What The AAF/NJTL Is About

Arlene Barco

The Amateur Athlete Foundation has sponsored the National Junior Tennis League for the past 19 years. The program has enabled thousands of disadvantaged youngsters to learn to play tennis. AAF/NJTL is special, as the following letters bring out.

(From a parent of a child who participated in the program.)

January 2, 2004

Ma Barco,

Well, while looking through my daughter's closet, I came upon her AAF/SCTA/NJTL tee-shirts. Recalling her wearing and competing in them over the past year fills me with happy and bittersweet emotion. She started with NJTL in Watts at Ted Watkins Park two years ago at age 7. At age 9 she has won 4 satellite tournaments in 3 age divisions. Needless to say we are very proud and happy with her accomplishments. NJTL has been a very good means of entry into tennis for us as a family.

We look forward to the new tennis year filled with desire, hope and great expectation.

I wanted to wish you first a Happy and Safe New Year. Also I'd like to say Thank You all for supporting NJTL in neighborhoods like Watts.

As Angela Haynes put it so nicely - (USTA magazine) - it does "Keep the Dream Alive."

Sincerely Yours,
Karen - family

Attn: Arlene Barco
Director, National Junior Tennis League

Dear Arlene:

On behalf of the City of Carson Parks and Recreation Department and the Carson Junior Tennis Program at Veterans Park, I would like to commend you on your year-long program, the National Junior Tennis League (NJTL). This program has been significant for the children in the City of Carson. Working with you for the last three years has been an awesome experience for Sam Noe, Recreation Assistant IV.

During the last Mercedes Tournament Championship at UCLA, you displayed confidence with our program by inviting six children between the ages of six and ten to participate in playing with a professional tennis player to showcase the NJTL program. These children will grow up to tell their friends how they met and spoke with tennis legend, Mr. Jack Kramer. This happened because you invited our program to that special event.

The parents and children of Veterans Park would like to express their sincere gratitude to you and your organization for making this program free to all participants. Mr. Noe is proud and honored to be involved in this free, important program. This program has served more than 2,000 Junior Tennis players in the City of Carson and its surrounding areas in the last three years.

I hope your program will continue to provide this excellent service for our community, especially at Veterans Park.

Sincerely,

ERIC W. FORSBERG, Director

School Tennis Is Rolling

Buck providing guidance

Jim Buck, a High Performance coach for Women's Wheelchair Tennis, assisted USA School Tennis Coordinator, Gina Pelazini, at a recent Physical Education Workshop at Huntington Park High School. Buck's presentation enabled participants to learn what it is like to play wheelchair tennis. The idea was to help improve wheelchair teaching skills and provide an understanding of what it might be like to maneuver a chair.

During a Tennis Assembly at Roosevelt Elementary School, students were serving up nothing but smiles while they participated in many activities, including a relay race.

High School Tennis

The annual spring First Serve team tournament for high school boys, who are players not ranked in the top 150 of an age division, will be played at Orange Coast College, March 13th and 20th. Tiffany Geller is the contact person. She can be reached at (310) 208-3838 Ext. 232.

With the season underway, the goal of Southern Section high school teams is to reach the CIF Boys Team Championships. Schools looking to defend titles won in 2003 include: Corona del Mar - Division I; Troy - Division II; Long Beach Poly - Division III; Brentwood - Division IV; and Whitney - Division V.

Each of the victories had its own meaningful story. Top rated Corona del Mar stopped a surprising Santa Barbara team, 14-4 in the final. Troy took a page from the Santa Barbara book by dropping Palm Desert, the No. 1 seed, 11-7. In a final that was all about the unexpected, since both teams were not the odds on favorites to reach the title round, Long Beach Poly downed Chaparral 11-7, to capture its first team tennis championship since 1910. Brentwood, who was placed atop the draw, justified its position with a 12-6 victory over upstart Redondo Union. The "expected vs. unexpected" theme continued as Whitney, another team that topped the draw, stopped Fairmont Prep, who sprinted out of the pack, 11-7.

Orange County Wins!

Alyssa Philipson

Five sections including Hawaii, Northern California, Pacific Northwest, Southern California and Southwest participated in the 4th Annual West Team Tennis for Youth Regional Championships at El Paso, Texas. Three SoCal combined teams took part.

The Orange County Stripes 14 Intermediate team, comprised of players from Heritage Park and Los Caballeros Sports Village and coached by Dave Wheelock and Chris Emery, returned home a winner.

“The El Paso Youth Tennis Center, (the host site), put on a wonderful event,” Wheelock said. “The kids and their families were treated to an evening cookout at a working cattle ranch. Everyone had an opportunity to brand (wood), make ‘s’mores’ and go on a hayride. Needless to say, the cookout was the players’ favorite part of an exciting weekend. El Paso Youth Tennis Center put on a wonderful event.”

Emery added, “twenty-five people traveling together through airports, changing planes, using four rental vans, and all making it to the hotel in one piece – quite an adventure! Without a doubt our kids played their best tennis in the finals against the Hawaiians, including a dramatic ‘come-from-behind’ victory in the boys doubles to clinch the win.”

Orange County was the best.

Mareschal's team was proud to compete.

Two local teams were involved in the 14 Novice competition; one from Heritage Park and coached by Emery. The other, a collection of players from Westlake Tennis & Swim Club, Anaheim Tennis Center and Tustin Hills Racquet Center was coached by Pierre Mareschal.

“Proud to be representing Southern California, five boys, four girls, along with five parents, and I left for El Paso after meeting each other for the first time one week earlier,” Mareschal said. “Team spirit was always high and the players performed better with every match. On the final day, we competed well, winning third place, defeating a strong team from Northern California. After our last meal together, we returned to Los Angeles with medals, gifts and lots of new and wonderful memories.”

A Team Tennis First

Alyssa Philipson

The Ventura team from Oxnard Tennis Center, coached by Mark McCampbell, and the San Diego/Orange County team, coached by Amy Gray-Cook and Chris Emery, represented Southern California at the 1st Annual USA Team Tennis for Youth National Championships in Tucson, Arizona.

“The Boy’s 18 team from Heritage Park in Orange County paired with the Girl’s 18 team from Rancho Penasquitos in San Diego,” Emery recalled. “Southern California finished in the middle of it’s flight. The event was well run. Overall, the competitive atmosphere was great. The players were friendly and interested in where the other players were from and what they liked to do.”

Emery continued, “one of the highlights of this inaugural event was the interaction between team members. They had a blast hanging out, having meals and doing things like a ‘night out’ for bowling. The best memory, by far, was spending time with Bob and Mike Bryan and watching them play, do drills and have fun.

“Apart from the evenings, the kids spent their time at the courts, either playing or supporting their teammates. The trip got everyone fired up for another season of Team Tennis for Youth. What a great experience!”

I N M E M O R I A M

Those who have spent time in or around tennis in Southern California knows of John Coman. A distinguished lawyer, who was a magna cum laude graduate of Fordham University, where he received his J.D., he specialized in commercial real estate transactions. As good as he was in his professional endeavors, Coman's involvement in tennis was even more impressive. Tennis was his passion.

John Coman

lections were officiating at Wimbledon, US Open, Davis Cup ties and his favorite tournament, The Pacific Southwest (now the Mercedes-Benz Cup). In 1968, he received the J.T. McGovern Cup for being an outstanding umpire. That same year, he was honored by the SCTA with a Lifetime Achievement Award. In addition, he was a long-time member of the USTA Umpires Committee, and the USTA Constitution & Rules Committee.

Because of his efforts, the Experimental Alternative to the regular Tie-Break, was added to the USTA Tournament Regulations. He championed the concept and many in the game feel it should be called the Coman Tie-Break.

In 1998, Coman was honored for his length service to the game when he was presented the Samuel Hardy Award. Last year, Coman was feted for having attended every USTA Annual Meeting, save the four years he was in the military, from 1935 through 2003. When he passed away on December 28, 2003 at the age of 92, tennis lost a dear friend.

He was a long-time member of the Southern California Tennis Association Board of Directors and its Executive Committee. He made an impact heading the SCTA Sportsmanship & Grievance Committee. He played a significant role in drafting the landmark lease agreement that brought the SCTA office to the UCLA campus following the 1984 Olympics.

The United States Tennis Association made use of his administrative expertise when he served as Vice President from 1981-83.

On the court, Coman was an umpire for 40 years. Among his foremost recol-

Another Exciting Season

Mark Winters

Parity is the watchword for intercollegiate tennis this season. Throughout the section little should separate many of the Division I, II, III, NAIA and Community College teams. Solid and cohesive programs, featuring four or five good players, will test schools with a star, who are not as deep.

The winners will be the teams where coaches choreograph and blend talent. Check the website list below for information about teams you would like to watch. Log on with – www. and web address.

Voice Your Support

Cal Poly-Pomona may be on the verge of dropping its men's tennis program. The USTA and Intercollegiate Tennis Association are urging Southern California Tennis Association members to voice their concern by E-mailing President Dr. Michael Ortiz, University President, jmo@csupomona.edu and (for alumni) Assistant Vice President for University Development, Ron Simmons, rrsimmons@csupomona.edu. You can also contact Cal Poly-Pomona coach Sandy Kriezel at (909) 869-2830 to offer assistance. In the past 12 years, over 180 intercollegiate tennis programs have been eliminated. Please lend your voice to help stop this alarming trend!

UCLA Wins

Julie Oshiro Kenton

UCLA won the inaugural Southern California Campus Championships, played at the Guy and Marion Martin Tennis Courts at Biola University. Teams from Biola, California State University Long Beach, University of California San Diego and UCLA participated in the tournament.

The tournament used a modified World Team Tennis (WTT) round-robin format that included cumulative scoring and allowed substitutions. The UCLA team, consisting of Nick DeGoede, Nida Denson, Mark Otten, Laurel Turbin and captain Anthony Horsley, captured the title, defeating UCSD in the final. (Biola edged CSULB for third place.)

UCLA will next play in the USA Team Tennis National Campus Championships, March 11-13 in Daytona Beach, Florida. Participants in this unique event, which crowns a national champion, include club and intramural teams from schools around the country.

The Southern California Campus Championships brought the College Intramural USA Tennis League season to a close. The program, involving an Intercollegiate Tennis Association (ITA), National Intramural Recreational Sports Association (NIRSA) and Southern California Tennis Association partnership, is designed to increase tennis playing opportunities at college campuses throughout the section. It also offers students the unique chance to represent their school.

UCLA was victorious.

Pacific Coast Men's Doubles Championship

William J. Kellogg

Tournament directors can appreciate how hard it is to start an event and keep it going year after year. Many times tournaments fall by the wayside after just a few years. Sometimes, though, the sun, moon and stars come into alignment and it all works, as it has for more than a century for the Pacific Coast Men's Doubles Championships.

The tournament began as a singles event in 1889 in Northern California under a sanction granted by a statewide tennis organization known as the California Tennis Association. Doubles was added in 1890 and for the next 17 years the tournament site was rotated between the Hotel Del Monte, the Hotel Rafael in San Rafael and the Oakland Tennis Club in Northern California. In the tournament's early history, a Challenge Round format was used, where the event's winner played the previous year's champion, (who had not had to play through the draw), in a best three of five sets match. During this period the Hardy brothers, Sumner and Samuel, were the dominant players.

In 1908 the tournament was divided. The singles event remained in Northern California and the doubles was played in Southern California. Some say this decision was made to "keep peace with the two Pacific associations." Others cite finances as the reason, but in any case, Archibald Way, then president of the Southern California Tennis Association, took over sponsorship of the championship.

After moving to Southern California, the tournament rotated between Hotel Virginia in Long Beach, Los Angeles Country Club, Los Angeles Tennis Club and Biltmore Tennis Club in Santa Barbara. In 1943, it finally settled in at the La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club, where it has been held ever since. William Scripps Kellogg and Perry T. Jones joined forces to create a doubles tournament, that hasn't been equaled over time.

The champions list reads like the "Who's Who" of tennis. Not only are most of the great names of the past inscribed on the solid silver perpetual trophy handcrafted by the famous silversmith, Mathew West, of Dublin, Ireland, but so are the names of many modern day pros. While some may be too young to recognize names like Maurice McLaughlin, William Johnson, Gene Mako, Don Budge, Pancho Segura, Jack Kramer, Ted Schroeder, Alex Olmedo, Rafael Osuna, Arthur Ashe, Stan Smith and Bob Lutz, many will recognize the names John McEnroe, Jimmy Connors, Rick Leach, along with Bob and Mike Bryan.

Today's matches are no longer the best of five sets, but the depth of the draw is greater than it has ever been. Top California intercollegiate teams such as Stanford, UCLA, USC, Pepperdine and Cal will be in this year's draw. They will be joined by out-of-state powerhouses like Texas A & M, who had a team reach last year's final. Oliver Maiberger and Ryan Redondo (from a long line of talented San Diego tennis players bearing the same last name), of San Diego State University, took home the 2003 title.

This year's 115th Pacific Coast Men's Doubles Championship will take place at the La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club, the weekend of March 5-7. Though many intercollegiate teams participate, the tournament is actually an Open event featuring many of Southern California's best juniors, senior competitors and teaching professionals.

Admission to the event is free. Make plans to spend some time watching the Pacific Coast Doubles, named "Tournament of the Year" by the San Diego District. For tournament information go to www.ljbtc.com or to obtain an invitation call (858) 454-6500.

Taking Them Beyond

Mark Winters

Kim Stafford

The Community Development Workshop, organized by Melanie Bischoff, held at Indian Wells Tennis Garden featured a collection of captivating speakers who covered a number of “don’t move from your seats” topics. Kim Stafford’s presentation was a highlight. A graduate of the Youth Leadership Program (YLP) that was run by the Morongo Basin Tennis Association at her La Contenta Middle School, the eighth grader enthralled the audience talking from her heart about the confidence she had gained participating in YLP and how the experience helped her deal with the death of her grandfather:

Gideon Smith, president of the Morongo Basin Tennis Association (MBTA), talked about the athletic and personal growth skills evidenced by youngsters who have participated in Youth Tennis, an MBTA offering, and the Toastmasters Youth Leadership Program. He added that Youth Tennis/Toastmasters Youth Leadership is on the threshold of expanding to the Boys & Girls Club of the Hi-Desert.

“From the beginning, we wanted to take the tennis kids beyond forehands and backhands, and give them life skills,” Smith said. “The combination of these two highly successful programs can have a lasting impact on kids in our community.”

The Game In San Diego

Lesley Waite

The Southern California Tennis Association sponsors the Combo Fall Doubles League, involving men's teams who compete on Sundays and "Girls' Nite Out", which gives women's teams an opportunity to play in the evening. San Diego winners advance to the Sectional Championships. Local teams that earned places in the Sectional draw included: Coronado Tennis Center Men's 7.5; Rancho Penasquitos Tennis Center Men's 7.5; East County CTA Men's 8.5; Rancho Penasquitos Men's 8.5; Fallbrook Tennis Club Men's 9.5; Morgan Run Resort Women's 8.5. In a District Sectional Championships face off, Rancho Bernardo Community Tennis Club Women's 7.5 defeated Coronado Tennis Center.

San Diego's easy-going climate means year-round playing opportunities are easy to find. A case in point is the USA Adult Spring League. Men's and Women's 2.5, 3.0, 3.5, 4.0, 4.5, 5.0 and Open are being formed. The competitive format is two singles matches followed by three doubles matches, except the 2.5, 5.0 and Open divisions where one singles and two doubles are played. Women compete weekday mornings and the men's teams play Sunday mornings. Participants must be USTA members. Roster deadline is March 20.

The USTA League website which handles registration, score entry and standings (to list just a few of the areas) can be found online at www.usta.com. Navigating is quick and easy. Check it out.

Local community tennis programs focus on introducing players to the game and keeping them involved. Gail Benzler, Director of Community Tennis, announced USA Team Tennis for Adults begins in March. Players take part in "friendly" competition emphasizing the social aspect of tennis while practicing their strokes and strategy. "Teams are forming now in facilities and clubs throughout San Diego County," Benzler said. "Remember, you don't have to be a member of a club to play in USA Team Tennis."

Opportunities to take part in "tennis fun" in the District include Family Tennis Day, Welcome To Tennis and Adult Night Out Tennis Mixers, along with USA Tennis programs. For more information about the wonderful array of tennis activities, contact Benzler at (760) 809-8437 or go to www.sandiegotennis.com

Tennis Welcome Centers, a concept the tennis industry introduced to attract new players, along with those who have not been on the court in years, has been launched. To discover more about this exciting new offering, log on to www.TennisWelcomeCenter.com and enter your zip code. You will be directed to facilities in your area that offer affordable programs.

YOUTH TENNIS SAN DIEGO

The Junior Show

Tom Durwood

More than 500 players participated in the 34th San Diego Junior Singles Tournament, which is one of the section's Designated Tournaments. A number of home-grown San Diego players were showcased in final round play. Steven Forman and Jason McNaughton battled in the finals of the Boy's 16 Tier I. Michael Lin was the Boy's 14 Tier I winner. Zach Leslie was a Boy's 12 Tier I finalist. Kristin Strimple won the Girl's 16 Tier I and April Bisharat was the Girl's 12 Tier I champion.

Natasha Makarova, who is ranked No. 1 in the Girl's 14 in San Diego and has lost only one match in her last four Girl's 16 tournaments, finished third in the Winter Super Nationals Girl's 14 singles and was a doubles semifinalist.

Youth Tennis San Diego's Kerry Blum was named the winner of the USTA Eve Kraft Community Service Award which is given to individuals who demonstrate the ability to create, organize and carry out community tennis programs for people of all ages, ability levels and backgrounds.
